FOR GOVERNOR:

FOR LIEUT. GOVERNOR:
EDWARD ECHOLS.
FOR ATTORNEY GENERAL:

For House of Delegates:
HON. THOS. T. POWELL.
GO THE POLLS EARLY.

Before another issue of the Gazette the election will have come and gone. No Democrat or true lover of Virginia will stay away from the polls next Tuesday. You owe to your state and country this service. Will you stay away from the polls and refuse the support expected of you? Tyler, Echols, Montague and Powell are the peers of any men you ever voted for. They stand upon a platform of which no man need be ashamed. They represent the best element of the state. Will you stay at home, and thereby take away from these men the moral support you owe them? Will you give aid and comfort to the political enemies of Virginia by staying at home? We believe not. We want to show the world what old Williamsburg, James City and York can do. Democrats, be true to yourselves and your country and go to the polls next Tuesday.

HON. J. HOGE TYLER.

Speaks at The Courthouse to a Large Crowd.

Hon. J. Hoge Tyler arrived in Williamsburg from Gloucester county, via Bigler's landing Thursday evening, and at night met the enthusiastic people in the Courthouse. Mr. Tyler entered the building on the arm of Dr. Moncure, City Chairman and was greeted with loud and prolonged cheering. On the rostrum with Mr. Tyler were Hon. T. T. Powell, Democratic candidate for the House of Delegates, Dr. J. D. Moncure, Chairman, Hon. J. N. Stubbs, candidate for the House of Delegates from Gloucester, A. J. Barnes, Chairman of the county Democracy and Pres. L. G. Tyler, of the College. After the cheering had subsided the chairman introduced Hon. T. T. Powell. He paid a high tribute to John W. Daniel for whom it would be his pleasure to vote for Senator, he promised, if elected, and had no doubt that he would be, that he would represent the people of his district faithfully. Mr. Powell made a good impression upon his audience many of whom had never heard him before.

Hon. J. Hoge Tyler, the star attraction of the evening, was then introduced. As he stepped to the front he received an ovation from his enthusiastic supporters. He began by thanking Williamsburg for its solid support—its very solid support. For it he returned his very solid thanks. (Williamsburg had one delegate who was uninstructed.) He paid his respects to Pat. McCaull in a very few words: "Pat's a very good little fellow. I wish he could get an office of some kind. Pat's like Cuba, he would give anything to be recognized by some first class Power—like Mark Hanna or McKinley. When I started out I began talking against the wind, punching a bag, as it were, and since Pat was nominated there has been no change—I'm still talking against the wind." The speaker said that he wrote a fine speech, went to Richmond and delivered it, when lo! the newspapers published the whole of it and ruined him as far as using that speech again was concerned. He wrote another and the Danville papers published that one. Since then he had been just picking up his speeches as he went along. "If there are reporters here to-night," he said, "don't publish this speech. Just say Hoge Tyler delivered the most eloquent speech ever heard here. That he raised the shingles on the roof. Put it in the headlines so I can show it to the people back home. It will also keep the people where I am to speak next in a state of expectancy." He paid his respects to the so-called wave of prosperity that has swept over this country. He couldn't see it, had travelled all over the state, there was no prosperity. The people were getting poorer and poorer. Here the speaker became very eloquent: "I wish I could see prosperity again. I want to see this gloom of hideous night swept away. Oh, I wish I could see the break of day for the toilers of this land. It is still dark and the night of gloom and despair hangs darkly over the land. If there was prosperity in Virginia I would acknowledge it gladly, even if acknowledging the fact cost me the laurels you would place upon my brow. I would lay them at your feet." Mr. Tyler then spoke of Republican campaign promises and what came of them. He then turned to the subject of bimetallism and gave some telling argument in favor of the double standard. He said he was the best free silver man in Virginia. He stands on the Chicago platform, wants to see the battle for free coinage fought out under the leadership of William Jennings Bryan, without waiting for the consent of any other nation on earth. The mention of Bryan's name set the audience wild. Mr. Tyler's speech was full of wit and humor. Jokes were used freely, and they always showed the point. He kept his audience in uproarious laughter and yet convinced them that in Hoge Tyler we have a fearless champion, an able and honest candidate for the Governorship of this dear old Commonwealth.

Hon. J. N. Stubbs was then introduced and delivered a rousing speech which greatly enthused his audience.

A letter received here from Mr. L. R. Warren, who is Prof. of Languages in Shoemaker College at Gate City, states that that institution opened Saturday night last with appropriate exercises. A reception was held Monday night and school opened Tuesday. The citizens have given 500 volumes to start a library. There are now 110 students in attendance and prospects for the new College are flattering. Prof. A. L. G. Stephenson is President of Shoemaker, who is also a William and Mary boy.
